Under the Violets.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES. Her hands are cold; her face is white; No more her pulses come and go; Her eyes are shut to life and light. Fold the white vesture snow to snow, And lay her where the violets blow.

But not beneath the graven stone, To plead for tears and alien eyes ; A slender cross of wood alone

Shall say that here a maiden lies In peace beneath the peaceful skies. And gray old trees of hugest limb Shall wheel their circling shadows round To make the scorching sunlight dim,

And drop their dead leaves on the mound, When o'er their boughs the squirrels run, And through their leaves the robins call; And, ripening in the autumn sun,

That drinks the greenness from the ground

The acorns and the chesnuts fall Doubt not that she will heed them all. For her the morning choir shall sing Its matins from the branches high And every minstrel voice of spring,

That trills beneath the April sky, Shall greet her with its earliest cry. When, turning round their dial track, Eastward their lengthening shadows pass,

Her little mourners, clad in black, The crickets sliding through the grass shall pipe for her an evening mass. At just the rootlets of the trees Shall find the prison where she lies, And bear the buried dust they seize

So may the soul that warmed it rise. If any, born of kindlier blood, Should ask, " What maiden lies below?" Say only this : " A tender bud, That tried to blossom in the snow, Lies withered where the violets blow."

In leaves and blossoms to the skies.
